Chapter 5 by Dominic

The bloody bullet was huge, bigger than his thumb. But he couldn't feel the pain, he didn't know where he got shot, nor find where the injury was.

Chapter 6 by Rubina Soudagar

So now he was trying to jump off a cliff. Let's see if that hurts.

Chapter 7 by Rubina Soudagar

I stood there watching him fall... Waiting for him to reach the bottom and say he was fine.

Chapter 8 by The Lesser.

Usually, no hesitation. fearless. painless. but this was different. For once in his life he was consumed by fear, and soon enough... pain. The creature chasing us was unlike anything we had ever encountered out here in the endless desert which we call mars. The hairless four legged creature reminded me of a spider, but it was the size of a small child and as far as i could tell, it had no eyes or teeth. I followed quickly landing next to him, i hit the ground and a sharp pain pierced the heels of my feet, up to my knees.

I let out a sharp cry as i made a heavy impact on the hard ground below me. As Dan helped me up, looking scared for once, i caught a glimpse of the creature screeching at us from above. Dan pulled me up and we scrambled up and began to limp as fast and steadily as we could to... anywhere.
